Faith in the True God

One of my favourite stories in the Old Testament is the account of Elijah confronting the prophets of Baal at Mount Carmel. Elijah challenged the followers of the false god Baal to show the nation that Baal is real. A simple challenge; we will both make an altar, one for Baal and one for the True God of Israel and we'll see which one demonstrates godly power. Of course Baal was shown to be powerless while the true God, Yahweh, rained down fire from heaven to completely obliterate the sacrifice that was placed on the altar (1 Kings 18:16-45).

The religious practices of Baal worship were very seductive. They focussed on indulging all manner of human desires and promised control over weather cycles and fertility. In essence, this false religion claimed that if you worship Baal, you could be your own little god, doing whatever you pleased and having power over nature and others. Conversely, The God of Israel asked for faith in His authority and trust in His nature of love and mercy. He asked the people of Israel to humble themselves before the Lord and He would then lift them up, providing and caring for them.

Some things never change. The name may be different (we don't believe in Baal) but the allure of a philosophy that promises we can be our own God is the same today as it was when Elijah was atop Mount Carmel. And just like then, when the promises of false beliefs are challenged they are found to be empty and destructive. In Jesus we see the true nature of God; one who would sacrifice himself for us. In Jesus we see how God exercises His power; he is with us always and is vitally interested in our lives. May we be alert to false claims that we can be God and humble ourselves in response to what our risen Lord does, and continues to do, for us.
