Sharing a meal

In almost every culture the idea of sharing a meal with people is a sign of acceptance and being welcomed into their community and/or family. When we were visiting the Asaroka Lutheran schools we shared a meal (mu-mu) as celebration of the partnership we share. In my work I teach students of many different cultures, and at the end of each semester we also share a meal together, as celebration of their achievements (it's great having food from Asian, Middle-Eastern, European and Islander cultures – as well as some 'Aussie' food too).

Today we celebrate a group of young people receiving their 'First Communion' – sharing that very special meal of Jesus' body and blood, in remembrance of the sacrifice He made for our sins. To be invited to 'Christ's Table' is a significant milestone in the Christian life and growth of these children. It's a sign they are no longer little children, but beginning the maturity in their faith – the next step is Confirmation of their Baptismal vows, and the progression of their Spiritual Life Journey.

Who knows where these young people may go in their life, but they can be assured that whenever they share this meal with other believers in Christ, they are sharing this special celebration of being a part of God's family and the community of believers.

Book Launch

As Lutherans around the world prepare to commemorate the 500th Anniversary of the Reformation, two new Luther publications will be launched in Adelaide later this month.

Dr Stephen Pietsch has written Of Good Comfort, which is based on his doctoral thesis, which won a 2014 Flinders University Vice Chancellor's Prize for doctoral thesis excellence. It examines 21 letters of pastoral comfort which Luther wrote to fellow sufferers of depression. In this book, these letters are analysed, with careful attention to their rhetorical and theological aspects so that their wisdom for pastoral care today can be harvested.

Dr Jeffrey Silcock has translated Athina Lexutt's book, A Year with Luther - From The Great Reformer For Our Times. This volume is a daily Luther breviary for pastors and laity, for use in college, seminary and university, and for reading at home. It is suitable for Christian believers and inquirers, as well as for those interested in Reformation history.

These books will be launched on Thursday, 29 September at 7.30pm in the Australian Lutheran College Refectory. All are welcome to attend this event, which will include brief presentations, finger food and wine. Copies of both publications will be on sale at the launch.

For catering purposes, please RSVP to Alice Lamnek – alice.lamnek@alc.edu.au by 23 September.
